² Past performance is not a reliable indicator of future performance. The managed portfolio performance represents total return for the periods. Returns have been calculated using the time-weighted method, they assume distributions are reinvested and are after investment management fees and indirect costs. Total and growth returns include accrued distributions, while income return includes paid distributions only. Returns do not take into account tax payable. Individual client returns may vary based on the contributions, withdrawals, and timing differences within the managed portfolio

Quarterly manager commentary

Market Update

Global markets finished on a positive upswing as major markets experienced record highs despite a surge in COVID-19 cases. October saw riskier assets shunned as virus cases climbed across Europe and the US, while the uncertainty of the US presidential election swayed market optimism. Despite reintroduced lockdowns, risk appetite grew over November and December as effective vaccine trials and rollouts were initiated and international shares rallied. A change in US leadership also impacted the markets positively, while a spike in global trade strengthened expectations of a global recovery.

The domestic market generated impressive quarterly performance, outperforming global peers as supported by fiscal stimulus, a rate cut, and an ease in lockdown measures due to falling case numbers. Strong gains were experienced mid-quarter as the economy moved out of recession and recorded a positive GDP result of 3.3%. Gains were mostly derived from micro-cap and Top 50 stocks which had a heavy bias towards the energy and materials sectors – these sectors observed robust returns due to renewed demand for Australian iron ore. Returns were amplified as the Australian dollar continued to appreciate against the US dollar.

Fixed income markets saw government and corporate bond yields continue to rise over the quarter as prices fell. Eased monetary policy and rate cuts as well as strong investor confidence in the vaccine trials contributed to a risk-on approach to investment markets, which had an inverse effect on bond markets.

Despite a significant reduction in Australian virus cases, the domestic economy is yet to bounce back to pre-COVID levels seen this time last year. As a result, the RBA reduced the cash rate and 3-year government bond target yield from 0.25% to 0.10% early this quarter. This decision was attributed to persistently stagnant unemployment figures and low inflation.

Portfolio Update

We remain comfortable with the current structure of this portfolio. Consequently, no changes have been made this quarter.

The best performing funds over the quarter were iShares Australian Listed Property Index Fund, Ausbil 130/30 Focus Fund, and Solaris Core Australian Equity Fund (Performance Alignment). iShares followed the trend set by AREITs, particularly outperforming their global peers as the Australian dollar rose in value against a depreciating US dollar. Ausbil generated healthy quarterly returns, due to an outperformance in energy stocks. Likewise, Solaris' outperformance was attributed to their positions in financials and energy stocks, as robust returns were observed due to renewed demand for Australian iron ore for the latter sector.

The worst performing funds were Magellan Global Fund (Open Class) (Managed Fund), Legg Mason Western Asset Australian Bond Trust - Class A, and Pandal Short Term Income Securities Fund. Magellan's detractor was mainly due to a material position in cash, which acted as a drag as equities continued to rally throughout the year. Falling corporate bond yields as a result of stronger risk appetite contributed to the underperformance of the Legg Mason fund. Similarly, Pandal struggled against their peers due to its high allocation to cash and corporate bonds.
