2 Past performance is not a reliable indicator of future performance. The managed portfolio performance represents total return for the periods. Returns have been calculated using the time-weighted method, they assume distributions are reinvested and are after investment management fees and indirect costs. Total and growth returns include accrued distributions, while income return includes paid distributions only. Returns do not take into account tax payable. Individual client returns may vary based on the contributions, withdrawals, and timing differences within the managed portfolio

Quarterly manager commentary

Market update

Global markets rallied over the quarter as U.S. shares reset record highs. Helping buoy investor enthusiasm was the successful passage of another U.S. stimulus bill and the varying rates of success for global vaccinations programmes. Forecasts for economic growth have since lifted materially, which reignited the inflation debate. Consequently, technology stocks grappled with rising bond yields over the quarter, although this only briefly halted their continued gains. Similarly, the renewed lockdowns in parts of the world failed to dent the strong optimism surrounding markets. This was notably evident through the laggards of 2020, such as energy and financial stocks, which delivered exceptional performance.

The Australian share market likewise strengthened as economic data was surprisingly positive, including a sharp drop in the unemployment rate. Despite this upbeat tone, the Reserve Bank of Australia (RBA) has maintained their 'lower for longer' mantra which has been highly supportive of both shares and the domestic property market. And whilst the share market gains were broad-based, the 'big-4' banks were the largest beneficiaries of the improving housing sentiment. Otherwise, robust returns were generated in the consumer discretionary sector, as services and retail stocks bounced on the improving economic outlook. Fortunately, the feared 'economic cliff' did not materialise as the conclusion of the JobKeeper program failed to hamper the jobs recovery.

The elevated bond market volatility resulted in subdued returns for fixed income investors as bond yields spiked over the quarter and they hold an inverse relationship with prices. This was in response to the improved economic backdrop and the likelihood for increasing inflation, as inflation erodes the interest payments on fixed rate bonds. The RBA responded through the announcement of an additional round of quantitative easing (purchasing government bonds), which sought to stem the rise in yields. Pleasingly however, Australian bonds now offer investors some of the highest yielding fixed income securities in the developed world, with yields back at pre-pandemic levels.

Portfolio update

The recent Strategic Asset Allocation (SAA) and Alternatives review conducted by Zenith resulted in changes to the portfolio over the quarter. The SAA review encompassed a downweight to the existing Listed Property funds and a reallocation to Australian Shares.

The Alternatives review involved the removal of Invesco Wholesale Global Targeted Returns Fund - Class A (GTU0109AU), and the additions of Janus Henderson Global Multi-Strategy Fund - Institutional Class (HGI1794AU) and GMO Systematic Global Macro Trust - Class B (GMO0006AU).

The best performing funds over the quarter were Orbis Global Equity Fund (Australia Registered) - Retail Class, Robeco Emerging Conservative Equity Fund (AUD), and Antipodes Global Fund. Orbis's exposure to cyclical regions had a positive impact on returns over the quarter, as the global economic recovery exceeded expectations, while tactical positions in various Chinese technology stocks rewarded Robeco with robust performance. Antipodes' outperformance was attributed to its large positions held in manufacturing and financial stocks as well as its increased net equity exposure.

The worst performing funds were Invesco Wholesale Global Targeted Returns Fund - Class A, iShares Australian Listed Property Index Fund, and ClearBridge RARE Infrastructure Value Fund - Hedged - Class A Units. Invesco's performance drag was because of inflation fears and rising yields which undermined the fund's positioning in the Japanese Yen - a perceived safe-haven asset. iShares' performance was consistent with the index as markets shunned bond proxies, while ClearBridge RARE struggled due to its holding in Orsted, a renewables utility stock, which detracted from performance as global renewables sold-off.
